VODAFONE APPOINTS EDS AND IBM IN GLOBAL IT OUTSOURCING DEAL

Vodafone has today agreed the terms under which EDS and IBM will manage its application development and maintenance services in a global IT outsourcing deal. The move forms part of Vodafone's strategic commitment to reduce costs while leveraging its regional scale.

Vodafone's operating companies in Germany, the UK, Hungary and the Netherlands will work with EDS as their outsourcing partner. Vodafone's operating companies in Spain, the Czech Republic, Australia, New Zealand, Portugal, Ireland, Greece, and, subject to board approval, Italy, will work with IBM as their outsourcing partner. Each contract is set to run for seven years with Vodafone retaining the right to bring it to a close earlier if required.

We are confident that our chosen outsourcing partners will not only deliver cost savings, but also an enhanced service, said Steve Pusey, Chief Technology Officer, for Vodafone Group. We look forward to a longstanding and productive partnership with both of them.

Each outsourcing partner will provide application development and maintenance services for key IT systems. Vodafone will retain full strategic control of the initiative, which focuses on writing code for and maintaining systems such as billing and Customer Relationship Management applications.

Vodafone expects that the first wave of Vodafone operating companies will begin to adopt the new arrangements from early 2007, with the others following suit throughout the rest of 2007.

We are pleased to have been selected by Vodafone to manage its applications development and maintenance in Northern Europe, said Bill Thomas, vice president and general manager, EDS EMEA. By applying our applications expertise and leveraging our global operations we will assist Vodafone in the delivery of its strategic commitment to reduce costs while developing new services. We are committed to delivering an outstanding service.

With this agreement, IBM will help Vodafone to focus on its core business, says Mike Hill, General Manager, Global Telecommunications Industry for IBM. IBM's extensive telecommunications industry knowledge and experience will also help Vodafone to accelerate its business transformation programme, drive down costs and increase innovation to deliver competitive advantage.

As previously announced, Vodafone has identified the potential to reduce unit costs by 25 to 30 percent within three to five years. Activity levels on application development and maintenance during the last financial year resulted in a spend of around £560 million. Under these deals, the number of application development and maintenance suppliers currently used by the Group is expected to be rationalised by the two partners, bringing greater economies of scale. The Group also anticipates that the initiative will result in improvements to the quality of software produced, as well as greater flexibility, leading to the faster roll out of more varied services to customers.

CAUTIONARY STATEMENT

This press release contains forward-looking statements with respect to Vodafone's anticipated benefits, including anticipated cost savings, from the global IT outsourcing deal described above. By their nature, they relate to events and depend on circumstances that will occur in the future. There are a number of factors that could cause actual results to differ materially from those expressed or implied by these forward-looking statements. These factors include, but are not limited to the following: failure by any of the Operating Companies to conclude negotiations, finalise and enter into contracts with one or both outsourcing partners; slower than anticipated roll out of the outsourcing arrangements; failure by the outsourcing partners to perform as expected under the outsourcing arrangements; changes in the scope of the work outsourced; slower than anticipated transfer of certain activities to the partners; changes in the number of staff expected to transfer to the outsourcing partners; changes in Vodafone's IT systems; higher than anticipated costs to be incurred by Vodafone under the outsourcing arrangements; and the impact of exchange rate fluctuations on the cost of the services to the Group. Furthermore, a review of the reasons why actual results and developments may differ materially from the expectations disclosed or implied within forward-looking statements can be found under Risk Factors, Trends and Outlook-Risk Factors in the Group's Annual Report for the financial year ended 31 March 2006. All subsequent written or oral forward-looking statements attributable to Vodafone or any member of the Group or persons acting on their behalf are expressly qualified in their entirety by the factors referred to above. No assurances can be given that the forward-looking statements in this document will be realised. Neither Vodafone nor any of its affiliates intends to update these forward-looking statements.

VODAFONE SIGNS NEW TERMINAL PLATFORM AGREEMENT WITH MICROSOFT

Microsoft forms a key part of Vodafone's three-platform strategy to reduce operational costs while improving services to customers

Vodafone has signed an agreement with Microsoft to develop software to enable the speedy and cost-effective roll out of new services on mobile phones.

Under the terms of the agreement, Vodafone and Microsoft will work in close co-operation aiming to ensure that Vodafone applications and services are tightly integrated with a Windows Mobile experience, resulting in improved mobile phone functionality as well as an enhanced mobile experience for customers. The Microsoft platform will complement Vodafone's existing terminal platform* portfolio.

As the platform proposal with Windows Mobile embraces the wider Microsoft developer community, Vodafone anticipates an increase in the breadth of applications and content created for mobile phones. The partnership will also enable Vodafone to access Microsoft's considerable expertise to help speed up convergence between mobile devices and computers. Additionally, it is expected to reduce time to market for new products and encourage customers to new services.

We believe that the collaboration between Microsoft Windows Mobile and Vodafone live! will deliver a compelling and unique new alternative in the consumer mobile market, said Jens Schulte-Bockum, Vodafone's Global Director of Terminals.

We are very pleased with Vodafone's decision to adopt Windows Mobile as a preferred software platform for its mobile business, said Suzan DelBene, Corporate Vice President of Marketing, Mobile and Embedded Devices Division, Microsoft. Together we will deliver services which we expect will help Vodafone achieve cost-efficiencies, while delivering new propositions to its customers, thus making Windows Mobile an even more compelling platform.

The deal forms part of Vodafone's wider strategy of streamlining its current platform portfolio to deliver greater cost efficiencies across the Group. Over the next five years, Vodafone expects to focus on supporting three standard terminal platforms across its portfolio of mobile phones: Microsoft Windows Mobile, Symbian/S60 and Linux. The first device to use the software produced under the agreement is planned to be with Samsung and is expected to launch in the first half of 2007.

Samsung has been proactively cooperating with Vodafone and Microsoft to enrich customers' mobile experience, said Chulhwan Lee, Senior Vice President of Samsung's Mobile R&D Team. Through this cooperation, we hope to provide customers with strong PC connectivity and rich multimedia features that are easy to use, and cost-competitive.

By focusing on these three core terminal platforms, Vodafone expects to be able to reap the benefits of a range of efficiencies such as reduced handset development costs, as well as the quicker and more cost effective roll out of new services, added Schulte-Bockum. This initiative aims to ensure that we do not have to create a different set of software to provide services on a wide range of platforms, so that our customers benefit from enhanced yet simple-to-use services and lower costs.

VODAFONE TO REALISE COST SAVINGS EARLIER THAN FORECAST FROM CONSOLIDATION OF EUROPEAN DATA CENTRES

Vodafone has successfully completed the principal part of the integration of its European data centres into central hubs, deploying state-of-the-art technology. This initiative will deliver considerable cost efficiencies across the Group through the significant reduction of the total number of data centres.

Under the initiative, data centres from Vodafone's Northern European operating companies have been integrated into a hub based in Germany, while data centres from the Southern European companies have been centralised in Italy. The German data hub will also manage a third data centre in Ireland that will support the local operation. This phased programme of migration will be completed when the UK finalises its data centre consolidation which is expected within the next 12-18 months.

By consolidating its data centres, Vodafone will benefit from improved economies of scale in purchasing IT equipment, reduced duplication and the more efficient use of servers. This will result in improved operational efficiencies and lower running costs in line with the Group strategy of reducing overheads through shared services.

As previously announced, the regional consolidation of Vodafone's IT operations is expected to deliver savings of 25 to 30 percent. However, Vodafone now expects to see these savings within two to three years, six months earlier than the three to five years previously predicted in May 2006. During the last financial year, the annual spend of the European IT operations combined opex and capex was approximately £320million.

Bringing together our European IT operations to create central hubs is an important part of our commitment to leverage the Group's global scale, said Steve Pusey, Chief Technology Officer for Vodafone Group. The initiative is already realising significant benefits to the Group and the operation is delivering on its ambition to be best in class. Service levels are improving and by capitalising on the economies of scale we are able to reduce our costs.

CAUTIONARY STATEMENT

This press release contains forward-looking statements within the meaning of the US Private Securities Litigation Reform Act of 1995, in particular with respect to increased operating efficiencies and potential cost and other savings for the Group resulting from the centralisation of its European data centres. By their nature, forward-looking statements are inherently predictive, speculative and involve risk and uncertainty because they relate to events and depend on circumstances that will occur in the future. There are a number of factors that could cause actual results and developments to differ materially from those expressed or implied by these forward-looking statements. These factors include, but are not limited to: changes in economic or political conditions in the Group's European markets; operational problems at the Group's newly integrated hubs; the development and use of new technology; exchange rate fluctuations; the ability of the Group to negotiate improved pricing arrangements with its external suppliers; and other unforeseen factors such as a delay in completing the centralisation of the UK data centre. VODAFONE AND YAHOO! TO LAUNCH ADVERTISING ON MOBILE DEVICES

Industry leaders to pioneer display mobile advertising for customers in the UK

Vodafone and Yahoo! have formed a strategic alliance to pool their expertise to create an innovative mobile advertising business that will enhance the customer experience on mobile phones while providing both companies with a new revenue stream.

Yahoo! will become Vodafone's exclusive display advertising partner in the UK. Yahoo! will use the latest technology to provide a variety of mobile advertising formats across Vodafone's rich and varied content services. Yahoo!'s sales force and technology team will work with Vodafone to derive benefit from mobile's unique advertising opportunities while delivering the best possible experience for both consumers and advertisers. Vodafone and Yahoo! intend to roll out the initiative in the UK in the first half of 2007.

Under the plans, customers who agree to accept carefully targeted display advertisements can expect to enjoy savings on certain Vodafone services. This proposition could extend to key Vodafone mobile assets including the Vodafone live! portal, games, television and picture messaging services.

Nick Read, chief executive of Vodafone UK said: "Since we announced our intention to develop revenue from mobile advertising as part of our mobile plus strategy unveiled in May, we have carried out extensive customer trials. We will now use the experience to determine with Yahoo! how best to ensure customers, who choose to receive targeted messages, get better value as well as a richer mobile experience. This will also ensure that advertisers are given a compelling proposition.

Marco Boerries, senior vice president of Yahoo! said: "This partnership demonstrates Yahoo!'s continued focus on extending our leadership in display advertising across multiple platforms. We are excited to work with a global leader such as Vodafone to help us define the emerging world of mobile advertising and create superior experiences that deliver the most value to advertisers and mobile users alike.

In accordance with Section 329 of the Companies Act 1985 and Disclosure Rule 3.1.4R(1) of the Disclosure Rules sourcebook, I have to inform you of the following changes in share interests of a Director of the Company as a result of the conditional award of performance shares and the conditional grant of share options. The vesting of the award and grant is dependent upon the achievement of performance conditions and continued employment:

		Number of ordinary shares of US$0.11 <sup>3/7</sup> in the capital of Vodafone Group Plc
		Award of performance shares <sup>(1)</sup>	Grant of share options <sup>(2)</sup>
Vittorio Colao
		1,073,465	3,472,975

(1) A conditional award of shares was made on 15 November 2006 by the Company. The award has been granted in accordance with the Vodafone Global Incentive Plan. The vesting of this award is conditional on continued employment with the Vodafone Group and on the satisfaction of a performance condition approved by the Remuneration Committee. The performance measure is comparative total shareholder return (TSR). The TSR of Vodafone Group Plc over the three year performance period 2006-2009 is compared to that of other constituent companies of the FTSE Global Telecommunications index and companies are ranked by reference to their relative TSR performance. If Vodafone's TSR performance is such as to position it in the top half of the performance ranking of the constituent companies, all or some of the shares comprised in the award will vest. The vesting schedule provides that 25% of the award will vest for median performance, rising to full vesting if the Company's performance is within the top 20% of companies in the index.

(2) The options were granted on 15 November 2006 by the Company in accordance with the Vodafone Global Incentive Plan and with the Company's policy on long-term incentives that has been approved by shareholders. The options will be exercisable subject to continued employment with the Vodafone Group and the satisfaction of a performance condition approved by the Remuneration Committee. The performance condition is that compound growth in adjusted earnings per share over the three-year performance period must exceed at least 5% per annum. If the compound growth is 5% per annum, 25% of the option will vest rising to full vesting if compound growth is 10% per annum. To the extent that vesting is not achieved after three years, the options will lapse. The options are normally exercisable at any time between 3 and 10 years from the date of grant.
