Dear Valued Customer/ Dear [Name]:

It is a monumental day for Rockwell Collins and the customers we serve around the world. We announced that we have entered into a definitive agreement to acquire B/E Aerospace, the world's leading manufacturer of aircraft cabin interior products. This transaction will create great benefits for you as our valued customer, by giving you access to an expanded portfolio of products across a wider geography.

A copy of the press release we issued this morning is attached for your reference.

Like Rockwell Collins, B/E Aerospace has leading positions in nearly all the markets it serves and a reputation for high quality products, on-time delivery, and building lasting relationships with its customers. We have long admired B/E Aerospace and look forward to welcoming their talented team to the Rockwell Collins family.

B/E Aerospace will operate as a newly created aircraft interior systems segment within Rockwell Collins and will be run by Werner Lieberherr, B/E Aerospace's current CEO. The combination of Rockwell Collins and B/E Aerospace represents an outstanding strategic fit by providing our aviation customers more products and services to keep people safe, connected and informed.

While we are excited to join forces with B/E Aerospace, it is important to note that today's announcement is only the first step in the process. We expect to complete the transaction next spring, pending the approval of Rockwell Collins and B/E Aerospace shareholders, regulatory approvals and other customary conditions. Until that time, Rockwell Collins and B/E Aerospace will continue to operate as separate companies.
