COMPETITIVE TECHNOLOGIES RECLAIMS RIGHTS TO SEXUAL DYSFUNCTION TECHNOLOGY

FAIRFIELD, CT - (JANUARY 22, 2008) - COMPETITIVE TECHNOLOGIES, INC. (AMEX: CTT) announced today that it has successfully reclaimed rights to its sexual dysfunction technology by terminating the license it had previously granted to Palatin Technologies, Inc. (AMEX: PTN). CTT now has complete control over license rights to the PT-14 sexual dysfunction technology. PTN has agreed to pay CTT an amount of $800,000 within one business day.

"CTT is continuing discussions with major pharmaceutical companies interested in licensing this innovative technology," said John B. Nano, CTT's Chairman, President and CEO. "CTT has always defended the patent rights of our clients, and will continue to do so. We are glad to bring this matter to a successful conclusion and to be able to focus on potential development of this technology by a major pharmaceutical company."

Commonly referred to as PT-14, the technology, a peptide analogue of alpha-MSH (alpha-melanocyte-stimulating hormone), was invented by a team of researchers at CTT's client, the University of Arizona. A Notice of Termination for the license was sent to PTN on September 10, 2007. The license was originally granted to PTN by CTT on March 31, 1998.

Mr. Nano continued, "This is another example of a CTT technology being at the forefront of the paradigm shift to treat individuals with integrative medicine, combining traditional and holistic medicine. CTT's management team is focused on creating value from our portfolio of innovative technologies. We are aggressively marketing the pain management therapy, breast cancer detection test, MC Square stress reduction device (www.relaxmc.com), solar panels, UAD surgical prosthetics, and the LED portfolio technologies to drive revenue growth, improve profitability and create shareholder value. Our full technology portfolio may be viewed on our website."
