On January 8, 2007, Boston Scientific Corporation (the “Company”) announced a plan to reallocate its cardiac rhythm management (CRM) research and development resources to increase innovation, productivity and competitiveness, and to enhance the Company's ability to deliver new products to physicians and their patients. The plan will result in a reduction of the Company's CRM workforce by approximately 500-600 employees during the first quarter of 2007. The Company expects the plan to result in after-tax costs of approximately $70 million for one-time termination benefits, including change in control, severance and welfare benefit payments.
