Item 7.01 Regulation FD Disclosure.

On March 5, 2012, the Company received draft Cohort Default Rates from the federal Department of Education (ED) for students of the Company s institutions who entered repayment during the federal fiscal year ending September 30, 2009 (the 2009 Cohort), measured over three federal fiscal years of borrower repayment. (This is a new measurement period. Previously, defaults were calculated over a two-year repayment period.) The weighted average of the Company s institutions was 28.8%, a 7.3 percentage point increase over the 21.5% weighted average for the two-year measurement of the 2009 Cohort. As previously reported, we had expected a majority of our institutions to exceed ED s 30% default rate threshold for the three-year measurement of the 2009 Cohort. For the 2009 Cohort, twenty-five of our forty-nine institutions exceeded the 30% default threshold. None of our institutions exceeded the 40% default threshold.

In a Report on Form 8-K filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission on February 28, 2012, we reported ED s draft results for the 2010 Cohort under the two-year measurement method. For all of the Company s institutions, our weighted average default rate was 6.7% for the 2010 Cohort. Given our substantial progress in reducing the default rates of the 2010 Cohort, we believe we have significantly reduced the risk of any of our institutions exceeding the 30% threshold for three consecutive years, or exceeding the 40% threshold for a single year, under the new three-year measurement rules.

If any of our institutions, depending on its size, were to lose eligibility to participate in federal student financial aid programs because of high student loan default rates, it could have a material adverse effect on our business.

Preliminary 2009 Cohort Default Rates by OPEID (under the three-year measurement method):
