LETTER TO SHAREHOLDERS

June 2010

W. Douglas Munn

President and Chief Executive Officer

Dear Valued Shareholder:

We are pleased to provide you with this semiannual report for Evergreen Global Dividend Opportunity Fund for the six-month period that ended April 30, 2010 (the period).

Leading up to the beginning of the period, a series of extraordinary financial and economic events affected the financial markets in the United States and throughout the world. After a prolonged period of uncertainty and falling share prices worldwide, stock markets staged a remarkable rally in 2009 that continued through the end of the year. In January 2010, concerns about the sustainability of the economic recovery led to a partial correction, but the markets quickly rebounded and ended the reporting period approximately where they began in 2010.

In the United States, employment data turned positive during the period, a welcome sign that the economic recovery appeared to be moving toward self-sustainability. U.S. employers added 162,000 jobs in March 2010, the most in three years. The unemployment rate edged down to 9.9% at the end of the period, after having peaked at 10.1% in October 2009 its highest level in more than 25 years. Still, more than 8 million jobs were lost during the recession and the number of long-term unemployed those out of work for 27 weeks or longer continued to increase, ending the period at 6.7 million.

Investors were encouraged by continued economic growth in both developed and emerging markets and were placing greater interest in underlying fundamentals, in sharp contrast to their wild pursuit of low-quality stocks just one year ago. However, this sentiment was tempered by concerns over the growing sovereign debt problems in Europe, the impact of Chinese policy tightening, and fears over U.S. bank regulation. A rally in the U.S. dollar and a decline in commodity prices also had an impact.

Investors appeared caught between increasing signs of a cyclical upturn and the fear of lingering systematic risks in the wake of the 2008 crisis, with the resulting market volatility. For instance, as the period drew to a close, investors became increasingly nervous about the European Union s willingness and ability to bail out Greece, while Fitch Ratings downgraded Portugal s sovereign debt and Spain moved onto investors worry radar. As a result, the euro sold off almost 1.5% in a two-day time period, extending its four-month, 11% drop versus the dollar. During that time, investors largely ignored concurrent data that showed U.S. durable goods orders climbing for three months in a row, and business confidence in Germany reached its highest level since June 2008. It was difficult to shake the feeling that the recovery in the West rested on a weak foundation.

In Asia, the situation was much different. Starting in the second half of 2009, Asia began to show signs of a sustained recovery, well ahead of the rest of the world. Without the structural balance sheet issues faced by Western economies, Asian credit growth picked up far earlier, particularly in China and more recently in India. In sharp contrast to Europe and the United States, where a fear of debt-deflation spiral hung over the market near the end of the period, investors in Asia were increasingly worried about rising inflation. Currently, the major risk we see is that Asian central banks will begin to tighten credit and choke off growth in the region. Notably, in March of 2010, India became the first major emerging market to raise interest rates in response to rapidly increasing inflation.

The tension between macro-economic forces, cyclical factors, and structural imbalances made for an interesting, if challenging, investing environment. Our current view is that we must be wary of the ongoing, largely unaddressed structural imbalances in the West, while cautiously embracing the strong cyclical upturn in Asia. It remains true that the U.S. economy was propped up by government borrowing during most of the period, which merely offset massive deleveraging at the household and corporate level. Renewed weakness in Western and Eastern Europe is a current concern, and negative surprises presently remain possible in the coming months. Sovereign debt crises in Dubai and Greece may not be the only ones investors will contend with in the next few years. Asia, on the other hand, currently looks healthier. With strong balance sheets and growing economies, that area inspires optimism that good investment opportunities may emerge.

During the period, managers of Evergreen Global Dividend Opportunity Fund pursued a strategy seeking a high level of income as a primary objective, with a secondary objective of long-term capital growth. This closed-end fund sought investments in the stocks of domestic and foreign companies with either above-average dividend yields or the potential to increase their dividends. To add to the fund s potential income, the fund also wrote call options on U.S. and foreign securities indexes.

We believe the changing conditions in the investment environment over the period have underscored the value of a well-diversified, long-term investment strategy to help soften the effects of volatility in any one market or asset class. As always, we encourage investors to maintain diversified investment portfolios in pursuit of their long-term investment goals.
