ITEM 8.01. OTHER EVENTS

On October 25, 2005, Apollo Gold Corporation (the “Company”) announced the temporary suspension of mining activity at its Montana Tunnels mine following recent activity in the eastern wall of the open pit. Although access to the pit is still possible, it is not within acceptable Company safety standards and the Company has commenced a technical review of pit access options and safety issues affecting the mine. The technical review, which is being conducted by the Company with the assistance of outside consultants, is expected to take two to four weeks. The Company plans to mill low grade stockpile material and produce lead and zinc concentrates and Dore gold for approximately 14 days utilizing a limited workforce. Many of the Montana Tunnels staff have been placed on a temporary layoff status pending the completion of the review. At this time the Company is unable to estimate the economic impact to the Company as a result of these events.
