S-4 Communications: New Jetnet Blog Entry

Things Feeling a Little Quiet Around Here?

Missy Cousino, Managing Director Internal & Labor Communications

I hope that by now, you're all feeling fully plugged-in to the exciting progress we've been making toward our potential merger with US Airways. A top priority of the new American is to make sure all of you are engaged in this process, and more importantly, are confident that your questions, thoughts and concerns are being heard. Through new Jetnet and all of our departmental communications, your managers, leaders and colleagues are working hard to make that goal a reality every day.

However, there are certain SEC regulations we have to follow, just like other U.S. companies seeking a merger. These regulations affect everything we communicate both internally and externally. And beginning this week, those restrictions are expanding which means our merger communications will be more objective, and a bit less frequent.

Why the shift? US Airways shareholders now have the opportunity to review the Form S-4 the registration statement that explains all of the reasons that the American and US Airways boards of directors support and approved the proposed merger to determine whether they'll also vote to approve the merger at their annual meeting, scheduled for July 12.

To ensure this process is objective and fair, the SEC prohibits American and US Airways from communicating anything that could affect a stockholder's vote. As a result, we'll have to take a break from the constant, in-depth communications about the benefits of the merger that we've been providing you since the start of this process.

The good news? This period will only last about four weeks. Even better news is that you still have access to all the information we've developed up to this point a comprehensive catalog of your Q&As, business education articles, leader blogs, how-tos, features and videos, all available on new Jetnet.

And you can still count on plenty of our regular communications things about our day-to-day business, network growth, fleet renewal and products and services. You'll even continue to hear about the integration process and the steps we have to accomplish to merge our two companies. Just don't expect to see a lot about the benefits of our potential merger or what you'd see from our combined company.

So stay tuned. Before you know it, our topnotch communicators will be at it again, delivering daily updates on the tremendous work we're doing to become the new American. The new senior leaders we introduced today are also anxious to get to know all of you better, so you can look forward to hearing much more from them in the future.

Talk to you soon!
