» American and US Airways to Vigorously Defend Merger Against DOJ

Today the Antitrust Division of the Department of Justice (DOJ) filed suit to block our pending merger with US Airways. Our pending merger was subject to a number of approvals including US Airways' shareholders, AMR creditors, the Bankruptcy Court, and the United States and European Union regulatory authorities. The US Airways and AMR financial stakeholders voted overwhelmingly in support of the merger and the EU approved the merger last week. Since the DOJ has formed a contrary view of the benefits of our pending merger with US Airways, the matter will now be settled by the courts. We will present our case to a Judge who will make a determination on whether or not we can move forward with our pending merger. Both American and US Airways plan to vigorously defend our position as we have maintained that the merger is complementary, that it provides significant customer benefits and that it enhances competition in the airline industry. In the meantime, we will continue to operate as independent companies and competitors. Read more on new Jetnet.

These A321s, the first in American's fleet, will have lie-flat seats in First Class and Business Class, which is rapidly becoming the must-have amenity for airlines flying from coast-to-coast. American will offer three classes of service, while other airlines have two classes of service. American added that its service between JFK and San Francisco on the new A321s will begin later in 2014. United Plans Transpacific Growth

United has indicated its intention to grow its transpacific networks with the addition of new services. Senior vice president financial planning and analysis, John Gebo, stated his carrier's commitment to the transpacific, particularly with its San Francisco and Los Angeles hubs. The transpacific is tremendously important to United. It is critical to our network. We have very strong transpacific gateways at San Francisco and Los Angeles, which allow direct connections. We will continue to grow our services over time and China will be a big part of that. Clearly it is an enormous market and one with lots of opportunity going forward. United also said it has no current plans to launch a low-cost carrier. The airline has previous experience in the low-cost market with Ted. The airline-within-an-airline was effectively just a brand that targeted low-cost travelers, and it operated for just less than five years between February 2004 and January 2009 when its operations were reintegrated with United.

With the 175-aircraft order, Ryanair has raised its passenger growth targets from 100 million to 110 million by the end of its 2019 financial year, a 38 percent increase.
