Subject: Dell meeting

Team,

As many of you are aware Michael Dell spent a few hours at RSA this week. Lots of people have been asking about the purpose of the meeting, how it went and what my thoughts were. Michael has been spending time meeting with our executive team and getting to know the RSA business a bit better. Over the past few weeks I have several opportunities to spend time with Michael ranging from dinners, meetings and one on one conversations. I have found him to be pragmatic and insightful, which shouldn't come as a surprise given what he has accomplished already. It is also very clear that he cares deeply about security. He has had good exposure to the market over the years in running Dell, but also thru his involvement in Dell Secureworks. The relationship between Dell and Secureworks was thoughtfully constructed to create leverage. Michael is also aware of our transformation activities and very supportive. He is keen to continue learning more about RSA and come up with meaningful ways EMC, Dell and he can contribute to our success in the future. It's all about creating leverage and accelerating our growth. Not surprisingly, he is also very articulate about the benefits of operating as a private company, including our ability to plan and execute on a longer time horizon without the blinding focus on 90 day reporting cycles. Having spent a vast majority of my career running private companies, I couldn't agree more.

There's lots more going on at RSA to talk about, so expect another update from me over the next few days. I just wanted to get a quick note out about the meetings with Dell since many have been asking.

Best,

Amit
