The Facts: Pfizer's Combination with Allergan

Last month, Pfizer announced its intent to combine with Allergan, a global pharmaceutical company and leader in Growth Pharma focused on developing, manufacturing and commercializing innovative branded pharmaceuticals. I firmly believe that, together, our companies will be even better positioned to bring greater resources to invest in productive R&D and manufacturing, deliver greater value to our shareholders, and most importantly, make more medicines available to more people around the world.

Much has been written and said about our proposed merger. But for all that has been published and aired, there is a misperception regarding the facts around the U.S. taxes we will continue to pay. After the transaction, we will remain subject to all U.S. tax laws. Additionally, the U.S. is one of the few countries that tax overseas earnings again when the earnings are brought home.

As a result of this combination, we will be less likely to face competitive tax disadvantages and will therefore make it easier for us to invest in the U.S.

To help clarify these points Allergan CEO Brent Saunders and I published earlier this month a piece in USA Today addressing the inaccuracies and misperceptions in the coverage. I am sharing it here to provide the right context and facts regarding the merger.

Pfizer-Allergan: Good for America

Ian Read and Brent Saunders - 6:57 p.m. EST December 1, 2015

The combination will expand our ability to invest in the U.S.

Pfizer applies science and its global resources to bring therapies to people that extend and significantly improve their lives. Pfizer's proposed combination with Allergan creates a global R&D leader and will enable us to pursue cures and treatments for conditions ranging from Alzheimer's and Parkinson's disease to cancer and rare genetic disorders.

The combination will allow us to invest a combined $9 billion in research and development, the bulk of it here in the U.S., making us one of the largest single R&D investors in America and expanding our ability to invest in the U.S.

There is a myth that we are skirting U.S. taxes. Not true. All companies must pay taxes on U.S. income regardless of where they are incorporated. The proposed combination will not affect the tax rate Pfizer pays on U.S.-based income, reflecting our two companies' earnings and 30 R&D and manufacturing locations in the U.S. It also allows us to maintain a strong base of 40,000 high-skill, high-wage jobs in the U.S.

The U.S. is the world's leader in science with the best academic centers and renowned scientists. All of our foreign competitors that do business in the U.S. enjoy access to our resources. They also benefit from the country's pricing system and access to our infrastructure. The U.S. has the highest statutory tax rate at 35%, and is one of a few countries that tax overseas earnings when they are brought home to invest.

The unfortunate irony is that an inversion makes it easier for an American company to invest in the U.S. and less likely that it will face competitive tax disadvantages or be acquired by a foreign competitor.

We appreciate that the issues raised by U.S. tax reform are difficult. And we know that many good minds are working to reform the system.

While that process unfolds, we will remain focused on developing innovative medicines that significantly improve the lives of patients.

We want patients to have access to medicines and have expanded our assistance program to four times the federal poverty level so that more patients in need are eligible to receive their Pfizer medicines for free.

The Pfizer-Allergan combination is good for America.

Allergan Cautionary Statement Regarding Forward-Looking Statements

Statements contained in this communication that refer to Allergan's anticipated future events, estimated or anticipated future results, or other non-historical facts are forward-looking statements that reflect Allergan's current perspective of existing trends and information as of the date of this communication. Forward looking statements generally will be accompanied by words such as such as anticipate, target, possible, potential, predict, project, forecast, outlook, guidance, expect, estimate, intend, plan, goal, believe, hope, aim, continue, will, may, might, or other similar words, phrases or expressions or the negatives thereof. It is important to note that Allergan's goals and expectations are not predictions of actual performance. Actual results may differ materially from Allergan's current expectations depending upon a number of factors affecting Allergan's business, Pfizer's business and risks associated with business combination transactions. These factors include, among others, the inherent uncertainty associated with financial projections; restructuring in connection with, and successful closing of, the proposed transaction; subsequent integration of the Pfizer and Allergan and the ability to recognize the anticipated synergies and benefits of the proposed transaction; the ability to obtain required regulatory approvals for the transaction (including the approval of antitrust authorities necessary to complete the transaction), the timing of obtaining such approvals and the risk that such approvals may result in the imposition of conditions that could adversely affect the combined company or the expected benefits of the transaction; the ability to obtain the requisite Pfizer and Allergan shareholder approvals; the risk that a condition to closing of the proposed transaction may not be satisfied on a timely basis or at all; the failure of the proposed transaction to close for any other reason; risks relating to the value of the Allergan shares to be issued in the transaction; the anticipated size of the markets and continued demand for Pfizer's and Allergan's products; the difficulty of predicting the timing or outcome of FDA approvals or actions, if any; the impact of competitive products and pricing; market acceptance of and continued demand for Allergan's and Pfizer's products; difficulties or delays in manufacturing; the risks of fluctuations in foreign currency exchange rates; the risks and uncertainties normally incident to the pharmaceutical industry, including product liability claims and the availability of product liability insurance on reasonable terms; the difficulty of predicting the timing or outcome of pending or future litigation or government investigations; periodic dependence on a small number of products for a material source of net revenue or income; variability of trade buying patterns; changes in generally accepted accounting principles; risks that the carrying values of assets may be negatively impacted by future events and circumstances; the timing and success of product launches; costs and efforts to defend or enforce intellectual property rights; the availability and pricing of third party sourced products and materials; successful compliance with governmental regulations applicable to Allergan's and Pfizer's facilities, products and/or businesses; changes in the laws and regulations affecting, among other things, pricing and reimbursement of pharmaceutical products; risks associated with tax liabilities, or changes in U.S. federal or international tax laws or interpretations to which they are subject, including the risk that the Internal Revenue Service disagrees that Allergan is a foreign corporation for U.S. federal tax purposes; the loss of key senior management or scientific staff; and such other risks and uncertainties detailed in Allergan's periodic public filings with the Securities and Exchange Commission, including but not limited to Allergan's Annual Report on Form 10-K for the year ended December 31, 2014, Quarterly Report on Form 10-Q for the quarterly period ended June 30, 2015, Quarterly Report on Form 10-Q for the quarterly period ended September 30, 2015, and from time to time in Allergan's other investor communications.
