RELEASE NR11-05

THE SPECIAL COMMITTEE OF THE DYNEGY BOARD OF DIRECTORS
ISSUES OPEN LETTER TO STOCKHOLDERS

Outlines the Case for the Board's Recommendation

Urges Stockholders to Read "Get the Facts Right" Filed Today with the SEC

HOUSTON – February 11, 2011 – Dynegy Inc. (NYSE: DYN) announced today that the Special Committee of its Board of Directors has issued an open letter to all Dynegy stockholders. In addition, Dynegy has filed a presentation with the Securities and Exchange Commission ("SEC"). The full text of the letter appears below.

Dear Dynegy Stockholders:

You have an opportunity to decide whether Dynegy should sell itself to a financially stronger entity and provide all stockholders with a known value today, or alternatively, continue to work through significant financial challenges. We believe that tendering your shares into the all-cash tender offer made by an affiliate of Icahn Enterprise L.P. ("IEP") is the best outcome for all Dynegy stockholders. As we have said before, the Special Committee of your Board of Directors unanimously believes that accepting known premium value today is superior to the risks of continuing as an independent company.

We have come to this belief based on our years of experience with Dynegy, our collective understanding of Dynegy's earnings potential and the variables that affect those earnings, and utilizing the advice of two independent financial advisors, Goldman Sachs and Greenhill, who have worked to perform financial analysis of Dynegy in the current market and under a variety of scenarios. It is our view that the current commodity price and regulatory environment, combined with Dynegy's cash flow and debt profile, significantly challenge Dynegy's ability to match the IEP return for our equity holders.

We believe our decision to recommend acceptance of the tender offer is further validated by the fact that Dynegy has recently completed two comprehensive "go-shop" periods totaling over 100 days. In the latest "go-shop" process, several firms performed due diligence including two who worked extensively but elected not to make an offer. This is despite the fact that the potential bidders, which included two large private equity firms, had the ability to structure bids in a manner that would have required IEP to either top their offers or support them. During the past two years, with the assistance of two independent financial advisors, the Dynegy Board has considered a wide range of strategic alternatives – including remaining a stand-alone company, as well as the sale of various asset packages – with the goal of maximizing value for all Dynegy stockholders.

The Case for the Board's Recommendation

We know that Dynegy has a strong portfolio of assets. However, last summer our collective view of the future of natural gas and power markets, as well as Dynegy's earnings power, changed significantly. At that time, we realized that the weak market conditions – led by significant increases in natural gas production volumes and corresponding steep declines in natural gas prices, which resulted in lower power prices – were likely to be long lasting enough to significantly impair Dynegy's ability to successfully navigate its cash flow challenges and high level of indebtedness. In fact, since last summer, the fundamentals for commodity prices and environmental certainty have only deteriorated, further supporting our views that accepting IEP's offer is the best outcome for all Dynegy shareholders.

In short, there is an intellectual case to be made for option value inherent in Dynegy related to market recovery. However, given Dynegy's cash flow position, we believe there are serious questions as to whether Dynegy will have sufficient liquidity available to reach eventual market recovery, and whether restructuring efforts to provide sufficient liquidity may result in a reduction of option value to current equity holders. In our opinion, the probability of that outcome is low and the risk to shareholders is unacceptably high.

We believe that given Dynegy's liquidity challenges, the IEP transaction provides a better balance of value to all Dynegy stockholders and we do not believe it is prudent to subject Dynegy's stockholders to the risk that this theoretical market recovery based option value will be realized.

Getting the Facts Right

As the final decision is yours, we want you to have the best available information and to understand the risks associated with the Seneca position. Accordingly, Dynegy today filed a presentation correcting factual errors in the recent Seneca materials.

We believe that Seneca is seeking to advance its own objectives, and in doing so, it is unfortunate that Seneca:

- Did not participate in Dynegy's open strategic alternatives process or otherwise engage with the Company to review Seneca's assumptions and beliefs relative to detailed information about Dynegy's business;
- Requested that it receive a waiver of certain provisions of the Stockholder Protection Rights Plan, which was put in place to protect all stockholders and to prevent anyone from acquiring creeping control of Dynegy without paying a control premium; and
- Disseminated materials that contained factual errors, inaccuracies, and exceedingly wishful assumptions about power markets and environmental enforcement that make its purported equity valuation highly misleading to our investors.

If Dynegy stockholders decide that continuing as an independent public company is the preferred path, we will continue to work to preserve the Company's value, despite the uncertain market.

As we have stated publicly, we will consider stockholder suggestions for director nominees. Although we hope and recommend that stockholders ultimately tender into the IEP offer, we have been at work taking actions and preparing plans for remaining an independent company.

The future of Dynegy is in your hands. We believe that we have provided you with the facts so you can test Seneca's assertions and make your own decision.

Sincerely,

The Special Committee of the Board of Directors of Dynegy Inc.

Getting the Facts Right

Ignoring Differences of Opinion and Just Correcting for Seneca's Obvious

Errors of Fact Reduces Seneca's Implied Price per Share to $2.70-$3.84

Dynegy Stockholders Must Have Accurate Information

- The following observations are meant to address the numerous public communications Seneca has issued over the past several weeks.
 - While these observations are not all inclusive, they provide a sample of how Seneca has misstated facts and made aggressive assumptions in order to distract stockholders from the certain value the Icahn transaction will provide to all stockholders.
 - Factual errors in valuing Dynegy at $7.50-$8.50 per share ($8.00 per share midpoint)
 - Selective and aggressive assumptions about projected cash flow
 - Dynegy doesn't intend to debate each opinion about the future. However, to hope for radical, positive near-term changes in the market is not a prudent bet for Dynegy.
 - As Dynegy's stockholders have the final say on the company's future, it is important that they have the correct information to make an informed decision.

Seneca's Factual Errors in Valuing Dynegy

- Looking only at the uncontestable facts (excluding valuation metrics requiring estimates and/or predictions such as $/Kw or DCF):
 - Dynegy's net debt as of September 30, 2010 (adjusted to reflect January 5, 2011 cash balances) is $3.565 billion, NOT $3.307 billion as Seneca stated. This error is especially glaring considering the data is publicly available and has been filed with the SEC.

Reduction in value: $2.13 per share

- Seneca assigns $88 million of value to Other Western Gas(1) (South Bay & Black Mountain or 352 MWs); however, Dynegy is obligated to decommission the South Bay plant beginning 2011, which has been publicly disclosed, and Black Mountain's value is not material.

Reduction in value: $0.73 per share

- In addition to incorrectly assigning value to Other Western Gas assets, Seneca does not account for the fact that Dynegy is obligated to decommission the South Bay plant. Dynegy will incur a net cash expense of ~$50 million over several years.

Reduction in value: $0.41 per share

- Seneca has not even reflected correctly the preliminary work of its Big 4 accounting firm regarding cost estimates. Without debating the validity of the work, Seneca included G&A of $75 million while the Big 4 accounting firm's report, disclosed publicly in Seneca's SEC filings, indicated a G&A range of $93-$116 million, which compares to Dynegy's 2011 estimate of $125 million (2). Seneca applied a 6x multiple in its valuation.

Reduction in value: $0.89-$2.03 per share (3)

Facts Make a Difference in Valuing Dynegy and Result in a Value Less Than the Current Offer

Seneca's Selective Disclosures and Aggressive Assumptions for Projected Cash Flow

- Seneca's cash flow assumptions do not hold up to basic scrutiny and raise further questions about the validity of its valuation:
 - Seneca's definition of free cash flow is not meaningful to equity holders as it does not account for working capital, interest expense, environmental obligations, lease payment and debt amortization that must be paid before cash could be available to common stockholders.
 - Assumes MISO capacity prices of $150 per MW-day starting in 2011, which is 45 times higher than the current market price of $3.35 per MW-day.(1) This represents over $180 million in cash flow per year that the current market does not support.
- § Also, erroneously includes the Kendall plant in MISO (it is actually in PJM West), further overstating capacity market cash flows
 - Dynegy estimates a cash requirement of $1.2 billion between 2011 - 2013,(2) versus Seneca's estimate of positive cash flow during this period of $1.5 billion.

To Make Decisions, Dynegy Stockholders Should Understand Dynegy's Full Cash Flows and Understand that Seneca's Assumptions may be Aggressive

(1) Market price indication provided by energy brokers. (2) 2011-2013 cash outflow was disclosed in Dynegy's preliminary merger proxy statement on page 59. (3) Certain Dynegy 2011 Estimates disclosed in preliminary merger proxy statement. (4) Total Central Hudson cash lease payment is $112 million, however ~$50 million is already in Adj. EBTIDA as lease expense.

An Unfortunate Chain of Events

Stockholders Need to Make Decisions Based on Accurate Facts and a Realistic View of Commodity Markets

It's Unfortunate that Seneca:

- Did not participate in Dynegy's open strategic alternatives process or otherwise engage with the Company to review Seneca's assumptions and beliefs relative to detailed information about Dynegy's business;
- Requested it receive a waiver of certain provisions of the Stockholder Protection Rights Plan, which was put in place to protect all stockholders and to prevent anyone from acquiring creeping control of Dynegy without paying a control premium.
- Disseminated materials that contained factual errors, inaccuracies, and exceedingly hopeful assumptions about power markets and environmental enforcement that make its purported equity valuation highly misleading to Dynegy's investors.

For purposes of full disclosure, we have also provided net debt balances as of 12/31/10, adjusted for January 5, 2011 cash balance.
