FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

BROWN-FORMAN SETTLES LAWSUIT WITH DIAGEO GREAT BRITAIN LIMITED

Louisville, KY, August 14, 2003 - Brown-Forman Corporation announced today that it has entered into an agreement with Diageo Great Britain Limited to settle a lawsuit involving the distribution of Jack Daniel's Tennessee Whiskey in the United Kingdom. The settlement agreement calls for Brown-Forman to pay Diageo 8.9 million British pounds (approximately $14.3 million) to end the controversy between the parties.

Diageo distributed Jack Daniel's in the U.K. under a contract that expired on July 31, 2002. Brown-Forman now distributes Jack Daniel's and its other spirits brands under a cost-sharing agreement with Bacardi.

Brown-Forman had previously disclosed the existence of the litigation and the amount of Diageo's claim in filings with the SEC and in its annual report for fiscal 2003. Diageo claimed that it had the right to extend the contract for an additional three years, based on passing certain required performance standards in the contract. Diageo claimed damages from Brown-Forman in a range of 35 million to 42 million British pounds (approximately $56 million to $67 million) for profits it would have earned during the extension period. Brown-Forman denied that Diageo had met the contract extension standards and sued Diageo in the U.K. for a legal declaration that it was not required to extend the contract. A trial had been scheduled for March 2004. The settlement ends the controversy between the parties, with each side to bear its own litigation costs.

Brown-Forman's previous earnings guidance for fiscal 2004 of $4.10 per share to $4.30 per share did not include the full impact of the Diageo settlement. The payment to Diageo will reduce this year's earnings by approximately $0.11 per share. However, the company still expects to achieve fiscal 2004 earnings within its previously announced range. The company will discuss this settlement and its quarterly results at its conference call on August 27, 2003.
