ITEM 5. OTHER EVENTS.

On July 15, 2002, Dynegy Inc. ("Dynegy") issued a press release announcing that it will adjust its previously disclosed estimated second quarter pre-tax charge from $450 to $500 million. The adjustment is the result of an increase in an expected non-cash charge in the company's natural gas marketing business. A portion of the expected natural gas marketing charge was included in Dynegy's June 24, 2002 estimate for the second quarter charge. Dynegy has since determined, through a balance sheet review and reconciliation process started early in 2002, that the natural gas marketing charge will be approximately $125 million. Management believes the charge is largely associated with the process of reconciling accrued to actual results in its natural gas marketing business and that it accumulated over a number of years.

Dynegy will record the natural gas marketing charge at the end of the second quarter and, if necessary, correct prior period financial statements based on its continuing review process to determine the periods affected. Dynegy has requested that its independent auditor, PricewaterhouseCoopers, re-audit its financial statements for 1999 and 2000. PricewaterhouseCoopers is already conducting a re-audit of Dynegy's 2001 financial statements. Dynegy estimates that it will take the remainder of the year to complete the three-year re-audit. PricewaterhouseCoopers will conduct an interim review of Dynegy's quarterly financial statements for 2002 once the re-audit has been completed.

Dynergy also announced that it expects the criteria for and interpretation of hedge accounting under the Statement of Financial Accounting Standards No. 133 ("FAS 133") to be one of the issues addressed in the re-audits. FAS 133 governs whether derivative transactions should be accounted for on the basis of accrual or mark-to-market accounting. During the five-quarter period ended March 31, 2002, Dynergy accounted for certain derivative transactions as hedges of its generation facilities. Dynergy received in cash and recognized operating margin of approximately $80 million in such hedge transactions on an accrual basis over the five quarters. If Dynergy's accounting treatment relating to FAS 133 were to change as a result of the re-audit, the income recognized over the five quarters may be re-allocated within the period. Cash flow for the five-quarter period would remain unaffected by a change in the timing of income statement recognition, if any.

Dynergy also provided an update on its liquidity and financial position, stating that it has maintained adequate liquidity to meet its current obligations and commitments. Dynergy further announced that it completed a $200 million interim financing which matures in six months and is secured by interests in the Renaissance and Rolling Hills merchant power generation facilities. After taking into account the $200 million financing and July 15 maturities of $200 million at Dynergy Holdings Inc. and $96 million at Illinois Power Company, Dynergy stated that its liquidity remains above $900 million.
