PART II

ITEM 9A. CONTROLS AND PROCEDURES.

The Company maintains disclosure controls and procedures that are designed to ensure that information required to be disclosed by it in its reports filed or submitted pursuant to the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, as amended (Exchange Act), is recorded, processed, summarized and reported within the time periods specified in the Securities and Exchange Commission's rules and forms and that information required to be disclosed by the Company in its Exchange Act reports is accumulated and communicated to management, including the Company's Chief Executive Officer and Chief Financial Officer, to allow timely decisions regarding required disclosure.

Under the supervision and with the participation of the Company's management, including the Company's Chief Executive Officer and Chief Financial Officer, the Company carried out an evaluation of the effectiveness of the design and operation of the Company's disclosure controls and procedures pursuant to Exchange Act Rule 13a-15(b) as of December 31, 2004.

Based upon that evaluation, the Company identified a material weakness which had existed since the second quarter 2004, and which existed as of December 31, 2004, with respect to the identification and accounting for derivative transactions in accordance with the requirements of SFAS No. 133, "Accounting for Derivative Instruments and Hedging Activities". (A material weakness is a significant deficiency, or combination of significant deficiencies, that result in more than a remote likelihood that a material misstatement of the annual or interim financial statements will not be prevented or detected.) Specifically, the Company did not have a process in place to ensure that it obtained information with respect to its Swedish subsidiary's forward foreign currency contracts. Accordingly, the Company's controls did not ensure that the fair market value of the forward foreign currency contracts would be recorded in the financial statements. This control weakness was due to the combination of the following factors: a resignation of a member of the Company's corporate accounting staff who had previously monitored the accounting for the forward foreign currency contracts, the lack of training of the Swedish controller in the U.S. GAAP requirements for such forward foreign currency contracts, and the transfer of the Swedish subsidiary's currency transactions to a small branch of a new bank that was not familiar with the U.S. reporting requirements. While management concluded that the error was immaterial to the Company's 2004 interim financial results, we nevertheless concluded that the lack of control could have resulted in a material error in future consolidated financial statements.

Based upon the Company's evaluation and the material weakness described above, the Chief Executive Officer and Chief Financial Officer concluded that the Company's disclosure controls and procedures were not effective as of December 31, 2004.

During the fourth quarter 2004, there was no change in the Company's internal control over financial reporting that has materially affected, or is reasonably likely to materially affect, the Company's internal control over financial reporting. However, in the first quarter 2005, the Company revised its internal controls with respect to derivative transactions to ensure that these transactions will be captured and accounted for in a timely manner. The specific steps that the Company completed to remediate the material weakness consisted of:

- * the training of the Swedish controller on the U.S. accounting for such

forward foreign currency contracts which differs from the Swedish accounting requirements,
* the requirement that all forward foreign currency contracts or other derivative transactions have corporate approval before they are entered into, and
* the addition to the Company's quarterly subsidiary reporting requirements that a fair market valuation report be obtained from the issuing bank and forwarded to the chief financial officer for review.
The Company believes that these steps have eliminated the material weakness and that no additional steps are necessary. There have been no material costs incurred by the Company in instituting these control changes.

Limitation of Effectiveness of Controls

It should be noted that any system of controls, however well designed and operated, can provide only reasonable, and not absolute, assurance that the objectives of the system will be met. The design of any control system is based, in part, upon the benefits of the control system relative to its costs. Because of the inherent limitations in all control systems, no evaluation of controls can provide absolute assurance that all control issues and instances of fraud, if any, within the Company have been detected. These inherent limitations include the realities that judgments in decision making can be faulty, and that controls can be circumvented by the individual acts of some persons, by collusion of two or more people or by management override of control. In addition, over time, controls may become inadequate because of changes in conditions, or the degree of compliance with the policies or procedures may deteriorate. In addition, the design of any control system is based in part upon certain assumptions about the likelihood of future events. Because of inherent limitation in a cost-effective control system, misstatements due to error or fraud may occur and not be detected. The Company's controls and procedures are designed to provide a reasonable level of assurance of achieving their objectives.
