On June 1, 2009, FreeSeas Inc. (the Company) opted out of certain of the corporate governance rules of the Nasdaq Stock Market (Nasdaq). Pursuant to the Nasdaq rules, the Company, as a foreign private issuer, may elect to follow its home country practices in lieu of the corporate governance standards established under the Nasdaq rules, with certain exceptions. For instance, the Company may not opt out of the requirements regarding the disclosure of a going concern audit opinion, notification of material non-compliance with Nasdaq corporate governance practices (those for which it has not opted out), the establishment and composition of an audit committee that complies with SEC Rule 10A-3, and the adoption of a formal audit committee charter. The Company is in full compliance with these Nasdaq corporate governance standards.

In order to opt out of the balance of the Nasdaq corporate governance requirements, the Company submitted to Nasdaq a written statement from its independent counsel in the Marshall Islands certifying that the Company's practices are not prohibited by its home country's laws. Although the Company opted out of all the Nasdaq corporate governance standards for which it had the option to opt out, it is currently voluntarily complying with many of the Nasdaq corporate governance requirements because it has not yet had an opportunity to evaluate each of these requirements individually to determine whether it wishes to voluntarily comply with the particular Nasdaq corporate governance requirement or apply its home country practice. At present, the Company has elected to comply with its home country practice instead of the Nasdaq corporate governance rule with respect to issuances of designated securities. The practice followed by the Company is described below:

In lieu of obtaining shareholder approval prior to the issuance of designated securities, the Company complies with provisions of the Marshall Islands Business Corporations Act providing that the Board of Directors approves share issuances.
